

FEATURED TITLE

Bic Runga

Belle is Bic Runga's fourth studio album, and her first in six years. It's radio friendly stuff with demure little melodies that will no doubt scatter nicely across the airwaves. Her own work combined with a host of other artists, including James Milne of Lawrence Arabia, Dann Hume of Evermore and, most importantly, her partner, former Mint Chick Kody Neilson, as both collaborator and producer. Runga also welcomed son Joe since her last stint in the recording studio and he's the inspiration for one of the album's strongest tracks, "Everything Is Beautiful and New", a prime example of her particular brand of introspection that resonates so well with the Kiwi disposition. Other treats on the modest 10-track album include the very catchy "Hello Hello" and "If You Really Do". Runga is not only one of New Zealand's best singer-songwriters but one of the most identifiable, and this album stays true to the sound she is celebrated for.
